Cal/OSHA COMPLIANCE & CERTIFICATION

NEW TO MARKET

California's economy is the fifth largest in the world. Only the U.S, China, Japan and Germany are larger. With 2.2 million businesses with employees, California also has the toughest and most aggressive safety regulatory agency, California Occupational Safety & Health (Cal/OSHA). Its standards are higher than even federal law requires. Not only must employers provide and monitor safe conditions and practices, but they must also keep auditable records, a complex task. To meet these demands, California employers are constant buyers of safety and HazMat training programs and supplies. This list of responders is organized by the SIC code of California's most demanding safety and health environments.
